

~ Photographing Nature ~

Location: Plymouth Area Senior Center
8 Depot Street
Plymouth, NH

When: Tuesdays, October 3-November 21
10 am-noon

Participants will learn how to think and talk about nature photography—and how to take and edit their own photos of the natural world. Treat yourself to a relaxed, inspiring and community-building experience!

Instructor John Anderson owns a photography studio in Campton and teaches photography at Plymouth State University. He was the 2013 White Mountain National Forest Artist in Residence.

Register early, as class size is limited.

Absolutely no experience is required, but experienced photographers are also welcome! Bring your camera (any kind—phones are fine!).

Lunch will be offered after class.

There is no registration fee, though donations are welcome.

Parking is free; transportation is available for those who need it.

Register by phone at (603-536-1204), email (rkoczur@gcsc.org) or in person at the Center, or online at www.experiencearts.org. These programs are co-sponsored by AANNH and GCSCC. Additional programs are being offered throughout the county between now and November.

This program is made possible through the national Seeding Vitality Arts initiative of Aroha Philanthropies with additional support from the Couch Family Foundation. Vitality Arts programs are intended to inspire and enable older adults to learn, make and share arts in ways that are novel, complex and socially engaging. No experience is necessary—only the passion to learn something new and to challenge yourself through an arts medium!
